Stock Market this morning, with price Stock Market this morning, with prices booming during the entire session under the influence of entirely unprecedented public and clique buying of stocks and covering of shorts. The week ended wit gains of from 3 to 15 or more points it all the active securities and with hardly a dill spot on the list, and this despite the fact that the early days of the week witnessed a healthy decline of 3 or spoints. The upward movement so far has extended in all from 15 to 50 ponts. The average level of the railway securities is average level of the railway securities higher than at any time before in mayears, higher than it was in the wint of 1898-1899. Many securities are damaking new high-price records. The present is a bull movement such as comes of once in years.

The question "that is agitating the mir of the people' at present is, of cours whether top prices have been reached a ready or will be far higher than the prent level. The advice of conservatives that some profits should be taken and lin of stocks reduced rather than increased a er such a rapid advance as that of the puthree days, but that excepting for tem rary recessions like that of Monday to price level seems likely to advance ma points during the coming three or for months. Purchases should be made on the reactions. These people base their opin-ion on the excellent condition prevailing everywhere for railway and industrial corporations, and more than this on the confidence of the public that such conditions ist. It is said by old market people that o public never in the history of the ock Market has been so eager to buy.

The bank statement was excellent in every particular, and it had the effect of entirely reassuring the people that have been fearing tight money and a depleted bank reserve. It was followed by the most bouyant fifteen minutes of the day at the close. The figures were as follows: Reserves increased $3,063,725, loans inreased $2,189,600, legals increased $2,612,500, specie increased $2,595,800, deposits increased $8,575,300, circulation decreased $28,200. It will be seen that the increase in cash was more than $5,000,— The increase in loans was a m one in account of the fact that under the system of averages used in making up the statement the early part of the week with its liquidation had more influence on the

Despite the general buoyancy of the market half a dozen securities were securely the leaders. Atchison, preferred, Pennsylvania, Union Pacific, and Northern pressure are appropriately as a pressure of the examination of his books and are trying to locate him. Pacific were among these. Atchison, preferred, went up to 83 1-2 at the opening, and although it declined somewhat later in the session closed near the top with a big net gain. This stock is apparently the favorite with the public, and the reason for this is evident. This company has son for this is evident. This company has had a remarkable history during the past two years, a record of increasing prosperity such as probably no other railway in the company has been always to change the company has been always and to have disposed of his stock close several weeks ago, but others suspected nothing until Stell left town suddenly on two years, a record of increasing pros-perity such as probably no other rallway in the country can show. And everything points to a continuance of this excellent cers of the commany saying he had gone showing. At present it is said 7 per cent is being earned on the common stock in

The Fall Meeting Opens Under Propitions Conditions.

Some of the Best Runners in the Country in the Stables-Seven Furlong Race the Big Event of the Day-Track in Fine Trim and a Large Crowd in Attendance.

The fall running meeting of the Washington Jockey Club at Benning opened auspiciously this afternoon. Fair weather though a trifle chill, a fast track, and to unusually large and fast field of the best horses in America ridden by the cleverest jockeys, all combined to inaugurate with success what promises to be one of the best meetings ever held in the history of the Washington Jockey Club.

Society graced the opening with a brilliant showing. A number of swell turnouts filled the carriage field, the club-house verandas were filled, and the grand-wide reputation. The town is sit ated at the foot of Klamath Falls, which begin at Upper Klamath Lake and continue through a narrow, rocky gulch for a mile to the lower lake. The descent is gradual and the falls nothing more than a rapid moun-tain stream, 100 yards or more wide, be-tween the two lakes. This place forms a sort of curve, or elbow, and was called Ewawa by the Indians, meaning elbow. Along this river or falls on a warm day miles of snakes, curling, wriggling, and crawling over each other, is no unusual sight, and if the weather is a little cool one has to wait for them to get out the way or take a stick and lift them asid as many do. The stranger on his first trip to this section is continually dodging and jumping sidewise, although he is informed that the reptiles are perfectly harmless. The inhabitant doesn't mind them at all. Little girls gather apronfuls and boys carry small ones around in their pockets. They smail ones around in their pockets. They are regarded as pets here generally, and are seldom harmed. They come down into the very town, and while walking along the streets a couple of dozen may be seen in going a block. They simply wriggle out of the way—crawl between the cracks of the plank sidewalks or move off to one side. The snakes are regarded as benefactors by the community, and there is some complaint at parting with the few required to fill the Minnesota man's order. fill the Minnesota man's order.

fill the Minnesota man's order.

The reptiles live and breed among the rocks and cliffs along the falls, and it is asserted that they have completely routed the rattlesnakes from the entire section, besides destroying all the mice and other pests that infested the place. They attack a rattlesnake and while one alone has been known to kill the largest rattler, a number will wind themselves about the venomous rettile and strangle it in a short time. It is claimed that before these snakes made their appearance the rattlers time. It is claimed that before these snakes made their appearance the rattlers infested the region, but they are now seldom ceen.

The species is easily and to be a water snake, and this is existed to be a water snake.

The species is said to be a water snake, and this is evidenced by the fact that they will take to the water if there is no other means of escape when crowded, and move about in that element with the ease and skill of a fish. They are of a dark color, about three feet long when full grown and have a stripe a little lighter than the general color down their back. All sizes may be seen among them, from the three or four-inch baby snake to the full-grown ones. On a warm day they are visible by the thousands and in many cases they coll up by the dozens in huge rolls. Pictures of these rolls have been sent, unon enquiry, all over the world. Had Immediate Use for It. (From the Chicago Evening Post.) "You need a new suit of clothes," she remarked, as she looked him over critically.
"I know it as well as you do," he replied,
"but I am economizing. I made up my mind some time ago to save a little money."
"And have you succeeded?" she asked.
"A little," he admitted.
"Good!" she exclaimed. "I hope it's enough to buy me a new bonnet."
